WOMAN SUFFRAGE WAKES AFTER 50 YEARS SLEEP.

Stratford, Centre of Movement Before the War Welcomes Speakers in Enthusiastic Meeting,

(Special to the Farmer) Stratford, Jan. 30—After sleeping over fifty years the woman suffrage movement awoke in this town last night with a whoop and bounded into immediate popularity. In spite of the bad weather and the fact that there bad weather and the fact that there were other attractions in the town last night, every seat in the town hall was filled and many stood through the meeting which opened the campaign of the suffragists in this town. Over half of the audience were men and they evinced as much interest as the ladles. Mrs. William T. Hincks, of Bridgeport, president of the Connecticut Association opened the meeting and presided during the evening. She made a stirring address and was received with enthusiasm. She first introduced Edward Porritt, an Englishman who has devoted his life to suffrage for women. He told of the causes which were back of the militant suffragette movement in Englishd and the results already obtained. He was listened to with interest. Mrs. Porritt, his wife, followed with an elucidating talk on the aims and objects of the suffragists in this country and their methods. Miss Emily Pierson cidating talk on the aims and objects of the suffragists in this country and their methods. Miss Emlly Pierson took the town audience by storm. She was applauded frequently through her address and when she finished everyone in the hall was sorry. Miss Pierson, besides having an attractive personality and a ready command of language, is apt and witty and she was frequently interrupted with enthusiastic applause. Before the close of the meeting over fifty signatures were afmeeting over fifty signatures were af-fixed to the roll of those who favor votes for women in this town. Strange to say over half of this num-ber were men.

Strange to say over half of this number were men.

Those who came to the meeting expecting to see the regulation suffrage speakers as pictured in the humorous prints, found a company of handsome, gracious and elaborately dressed women in dead earnest. There were no ranters clad in bloomers ready to bury their claws in the hair of the horrid men. The speakers immediately gained the confidence and respect of the audience and retained it throughout the meeting.

The Chairman, Mrs. Hincks, read a letter from Senator Stiles Judson who is now in the Bermudas, regretting, his inability to be present at the opening meeting in this town and promising to speak for the ladies at any future meetings which he is able to attend.

This meeting was part of the trish miss and which covers Fairfield. New Haven and Hartford counties, Later a league will be formed in this town as enough names have aiready been signed to warrant such a move.
